Chapter 17

Pain and pain management

Anthony Wheeldon

Senior Lecturer, Department of Adult Nursing and Primary Care, School of Health and Social Work, University of Hertfordshire, Hatfield, Hertfordshire, UK

Further resources

British Pain Society

http://www.britishpainsociety.org

This website contains publications, newsletters and information for patients, all of which can inform your care of patients with chronic pain and help you in your academic work.

Pain Concern

http://www.painconcern.org.uk

This website also hosts regular radio programmes and podcasts, which could be helpful to you in your academic work. Its discussion sites also provide insight into how individuals cope with chronic pain.

Pain Talk

http://www.pain-talk.co.uk/

This is a useful website for students studying chronic pain. Once registered, viewers can gain access to discussion forums, news, pain search engines, information on study days and conferences, and details of other useful pain websites.

NHS Choices

http://www.nhs.uk/Conditions/Back-pain

This website provides guidance to help you care for patients in pain. It gives access to advice on back pain, as well as a host of other pain conditions.

London Pain Consortium

http://www.lpc.ac.uk/html/

This website gives the latest research into pain physiology, and London Pain Consortium publications, as well as links to other pain websites and journals. This site provides an excellent resource for students studying chronic and acute pain.

Fundamentals of Applied Pathophysiology: An Essential Guide for Nursing and Healthcare Students, Fourth Edition. Edited by Ian Peate.
© 2021 John Wiley & Sons Ltd. Published 2021 by John Wiley & Sons Ltd.
Student companion website: www.wiley.com/go/fundamentalsofappliedpathophysiology/student4e
Instructor companion website: www.wiley.com/go/fundamentalsofappliedpathophysiology/instructor4e